

"The Future of Further Education"

Friday 22 March 2013

Speaker: Bradley Lightbody

Bradley Lightbody is the author of the best selling textbook 'Outstanding Teaching and Learning 14-19' (2009) which provides a comprehensive review of leading Academic, OFSTED and Professional guidance on how to deliver teaching and learning to OFSTED Grade One standards.

Bradley has also recently released a new book entitled 'The ilearning Revolution: A New Pedagogy' which examines changes to the recent technological landscape and the need for educators to embrace the digital age. Bradley's book provides further compelling evidence of the 'flipped learning' model, its value to teachers and its impact on student engagement and achievement.

Bradley is currently the Managing Director of Collegenet.co.uk, a past OFSTED inspector, Head of Teacher training, Director of Sixth Form and Director of Quality. He leads observation teams and training events in numerous FE colleges every year, and is acknowledged as one of the most powerful and insightful speakers on outstanding teaching in the schools and FE sectors.

Bradley has also published books on History ('The second World War: Ambitions to Nemesis, 2004; 'The Cold War, 1999) and written for the BBC History website.
